Option A: The United Kingdom and the United States of America

Section A: The US Constitution

Source

For over two centuries the Constitution has remained in force because its Framers successfully separated and balanced governmental powers to safeguard the interests of majority rule and minority rights, of liberty and equality, and of the central and state governments. More a concise statement of national principles than a detailed plan of governmental operation, the Constitution has evolved to meet the changing needs of a modern society profoundly different from the eighteenth century world in which its Framers lived.

- 2 Explain what is meant by the term “limited government”. Support your answer with a relevant example. [5]
- 3 Explain how members of the House of Representatives carry out their representative function. [10]
- 4 Compare and contrast the effectiveness of the US Congress and UK Parliament as scrutinising bodies. [25]
- 5 Either
- (a) “There are fewer differences today between the powers of the US President and the UK Prime Minister.” Evaluate this view. [30]
- Or
- (b) “Neither the US President nor the UK Prime Minister can afford to ignore their respective legislatures.” Evaluate this view. [30]

Option B: The United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland

Section A: The Irish Constitution

Source

The constitution grants the Supreme Court authority to interpret its provisions and to strike down the laws of the Oireachtas and activities of the Government it finds to be unconstitutional. Under judicial review the quite broad meaning of certain articles has come to be explored and expanded upon since 1937. In the 1973 case of McGee v. Attorney General the court invoked this right to strike down laws banning the sale of contraceptives. The court has also issued a controversial interpretation of Article 40.3, which prohibits abortion. In the 1992 case of the Attorney General v. X, (commonly known simply as the “X case”) the Supreme Court ruled that abortion could be allowed under certain circumstances.
